The statement is given out at the press bureau of the Committee of One Hundred having in hand the arrangements for next month's Columbian celebration, that the hotel men of the city have not contributed to the fund for defraying the expenses of celebration, but that they are quite eager to rent their windows to people who wish to witness the great parades, and are demand-

Ferdinand P. Earle, of the Hotel Normandie, is the hotel man on the Committee, but he could not be found this morning. Mr. Coleman, of the Everett, said: "Why October is the best hotel month in the year, so far as that goes, and every hotel in town would be full all next month, anyway. As for the Everett House, it is a family hotel."

A morning paper made the statement that the Everett House people had objected to the erection of grand stands on Union Square because it interferes with their business of reading newspapers. To this Mr. Coleman said indignantly:

"That story is absurd, and false, as well. We do object to the erection of another grand stand on our side of the plaza, simply cutting off the view from our ground floor and the parlor floor above. We protest that it is not morally right, though we understand that the Legislature has given the legal right to erect such a stand, even before our windows."

AN AGREEABLE SURPRISE.

Hash and Prunes Were Unknown in This Boarding-House.

He was taking his first meal at his new boarding-house and there was some evidence that he didn't like it, says the De-

"We do not propose to rent our windows,"

"No, sir," answered the waiter. "Some what, sir?" asked the waiter, politely.

"Some hash. Don't you know, what hash is?"

"No, sir. Don't have it here. I can't get it if I want it if," he asked, dictating.

"No, sir. If you want hash you'll have to go somewhere else."

"I'll go to the kitchen and get it," pronounced the waiter.

Q "That statute is authority enough for us to place grand jury members on the committee," said Assistant Secretary Walsh.

A When told that some hotel men denied renting their widows, Assistant Secretary Walsh, speaking for Mr. Walsh, said: "I am assured that the St. Marc Hotel people on Fifth avenue have rented the entire front of their houses for $700."

Q Commissioner Walsh called upon Mayor Grant to-day and after this conference the Q "I don't know," he said, changing the subject.

A "Haven't any brunes, sir," responded the waiter.

Q "No grines?"

A "No."

Q "Can't I get brunes here, either?"

A "No, sir. I'm sorry."

Q The new board was becoming excited.

A "I'll tell the landlady to come here," he

"A special call has been sent out to-day to each member of the Committee and asking his attendance."

"You have been correctly informed," she admitted, with some trepidation, for he looked like a man who could pay.

INTELLIGENT DOGS.

A Little Incident Which Destroyed a Young Man's Faith.

Sometimes young men are deterred from entering upon matrimony by such incidents as the following, which is

Dr. Gardner, of Sharon Springs, N.Y. is the owner of several dogs—Gordon and Irish setters. A little while ago four of them disappeared and were absent for six days. On Sunday they returned, not together, but separately, at intervals of a few minutes. The first to appear was a black and tan pointer, which had a small white patch on its chest. It was followed by a black and tan setter, a black and tan pointer, and a black and tan pointer. The last to appear was a black and tan pointer, which had a small white patch on its chest. The dogs were all in good health and appeared to be in good spirits. The dogs were all in good health and appeared to be in good spirits.

The dogs looked half starved and evidently expected to be punished for their truancy. In the evening their absence was satisfactorily explained.

One of Dr. Gardner's hired men, John Miller, started for a pond about two miles distant for the purpose of gathering wood.

lilies. As he neared the pond he came across three of the dogs, Nellie, Beauty and Brownie, in the woods. Rix was not in sight.

John presently discovered that the dogs had chased two young coons into the hollow of an old tree. Rix had forced himself so tightly into the tree that he could not release himself. The three other detainees were also stuck in his trouble, but had remained by him for help. They had made efforts to release him by breaking the tree, but to no purpose. They had barked to call for help, but the neighbors who heard them paid no attention.

With the aid of a fence rail John Miller soon released Rix from his perilous position. The coons were dead. Rix would certainly have died had the other dogs de-
